Why yes, we will. Here, imglip.com/ai-meme (warning, may contain vulgarity) Drake Posting refers to the practice of posting reaction images and other still images from the Music Video of Canadian Hip Hop Artist's 2015 hit single Hotline Bling to the image board site 4chan.jpg Origin's original image is taken from the music video for Drake's 2015 hit R&B single Hotline Bling and performs several different dance moves and gestures, including hip-hop artists raise their hands next to their faces in disgust (see below). The pose in question is then isolated in the reaction image and began to be distributed on the 4chan/v/ (video game) board as early as mid-to-late 2015, and is the fastest known reaction image found in the v/ (video game) thread about the first person shooter posted on October 31 of that year. Meanwhile, the early use of the term drake posting to explain the general discussion of 4chan hip-hop artists dates back to comments posted on the /r/fit/ (fitness) thread on May 4, 2015. In January 2016, Drake's screenshot of the music video Hotline Bling quickly fell into a trend on various 4chan forums, including January 3/mu/, January 5/int/ (International), and January 8/v/ (video games). Between January and March 2016, the term Drake Posting was mentioned in hundreds of independently archived discussion threads across 4chan. As a result of its increased presence on the 4chan image board, the Drake Posting phenomenon encouraged many tangent discussion threads in the /r/4chan section of Sheekey Forum and Reddit, a 4chan-affiliated community and archive site. On January 30, Sheekey Forum user TechHater asked about the popularity of Drake Posting on the site in a Q&A thread. On February 2, Repditor Bobbistef referred to Drake Posting in response to the /r/4chan thread, which introduces the arrival of a new exploitable meme based on the character Pacha from Disney's 2000 animated buddy comedy film Emperor's New Groove. On February 22, Sheekey Forum User Need_TLC asked other forum members' favorite Drake songs, What is your favorite Drake song since Drake has officially become vidya-related Seakey Forum culture? Cat Drake On December 1@yisucrist 5, 2016, Instagram users released a photoshop version of Drake's Don't Like featuring a black cat's head on Drake's body. Next to the cat is a cat toy and a cat box. The post (shown below) received more than 32,000 likes in a little over a year. About 14 months later, on February 22, twitter user @DustyFotter posted a version of this meme with a new cat piled up on Drake's face. Next to the cat picture is a cat bed and cardboard box, which indicates that the cat prefers the box to the bed. Posts (shown below, left) received more than 12,000 retweets and 28,000 likes in four days. Later that day, Redditor JM-Rie posted a variation of /r/memes subreddit with a keyboard instead of a cardboard box. Posts (bottom figure, center) received more than 27,000 points (92% up vote) and 190 comments. During the next few hours, people began posting more varieties of memes based on common forms found in cats (example below, right). The next day, The Daily Dot published an article about the emergence of memes. Examples of interests in searching
